Presentation

The e-learning package is aimed at university students from different disciplines, research staff, Higher Education professors and professionals who work in the field to address the social inclusion of migrant women with a gender perspective from Human Rights, an intersectional approach and interdisciplinary.

The general objective of this resource is to improve the training of the different social agents who work or will work in the near future in migration and thus help combat discrimination, segregation, racism, harassment and violence, assuming the triple role that universities must carry out both in research, training and in social commitment.

The contents are organized in 8 modules and each module has a double dimension: one transnational and one national. Training is based on theory and practice.

Learning modality: online.

Languages: English, Spanish, Portuguese, French, Italian, Slovenian and Greek.

Cost: Free.
